Notes for William Gregory:

GREGORY HISTORY - OUR ANCIENT NAME

Gregory is the English form of the Greek name Gregorios. Gregorios, says The History of Christian Names (1863), is derived from a late and corrupted form of Greek verb meaning to watch, or wake. It is easy to understand why so many early bishops were called Gregorios, or Gregorius - the Latin form - since they had to watch over their flocks. As the pagans were converted, they adopted new names - often commemorative church fathers or indicating Christian virtues. This accounts for the distribution throughout Christendom of the name Gregory in its various national forms - Gregoire, French; Gregorio, Italian and Spanish; Gregos, Danish; Gregoor, Dutch; Rehor, Bohemian; and Greis, said to be the Swedish form. Gregory should not be confused with MacGregor names because there is no etymological connection between the two names. The Scotch Gregor is from "grig," Celtic for fierce, say some authorities or "greigh," a herd, assert others.

In Catholic England many infants were christened Gregory, usually for Gregory the Great (St. Gregory, Pope Gregory I), who was especially popular because he had been instrumental in converting the people of the Kingdom of Kent to Christianity. In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries the common people adopted family names. Many converted their fathers' single appellations into surnames. All over England, Gregory families came into existence. The Rotuli Curiae Regis for 1199 lists a William Fitz-Gregory, Fitz meaning son. This Gregory, Father of William may have been the sire of one of the earliest English Gregory families. Five saints, seventeen popes, many bishops, the Gregorian calendar, and the Gregorian chants have made this one of the most beloved of Christian names. Although our particular Gregory lineage is Scotch-Irish, it is highly probable that one of these early English Gregories is our ancestor.

The Scotch-Irish were among the frequent early arrivals in the colonies. Between 1720 and 1775, over a quarter million Scotchmen (who had been sent to Ulster in Northern Ireland by James I to keep the Irish under control) settled in places like the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, Pennsylvania, the Piedmont area of North Carolina, and all along the Eastern seaboard. By the time the colonies declared their independence from England, one out of ten American settlers was Scotch-Irish. These hearty people helped their new homeland in another way - when they found all the good land along the coast already taken, these Scotch-Irish became the corps of pioneers who went west to settle America's heartland.

The Scotch-Irish were not Irish at all but simply Scotchmen who had lived in Ireland. Most of them were Presbyterians. They had left their homes in the north of Ireland because they had not been well treated by the English Government. In 1698, upon the demand of the English manufacturers, Parliament by a series of repressive acts destroyed the woolen industry of northern Ireland. As a result of this legislation, twenty thousand of the Protestant citizens of Ulster, deprived of employment left Ireland for America. This blow to the industry of Ulster was followed in the reign of Queen Anne by laws which persecuted the Scotch-Irish on account of their religious beliefs. Hence this poor people had good reason for leaving Ireland.

The Scotch-Irish began to emigrate to America in the early years of the eighteenth century, and it is probable that by 1770 half a million had settled in the colonies. They settled in all parts of British America, and there was hardly a colony upon which they did not leave their mark. But most of the Scotch-Irish settled in Pennsylvania. In 1729 the governor of the colony became alarmed lest the newcomers should make themselves the masters of his province. "It looks," said the governor "as if all Ireland would send all its inhabitants hither, for last week not less than six ships arrived." The Scotch-Irish were the best of pioneers, and they soon were out on the frontier, making settlements wherever they could find good vacant lands. They paid but little attention to the claims of the Indians, for they thought "it was against the laws of God and nature that so much good land should be idle while so many Christians wanted it to work on and to raise their bread."

They pushed out in Pennsylvania in almost every direction, but during the first years of the eighteenth century they moved along for the most part with the Germans and settled in the Cumberland and Shenandoah Valleys.

Notes for Eva Gregory:

Buried: Pleasant Grove, Hardin Co., KY

She was murdered on her way on horseback to the store of Alex Montgomery at Solway, KY. Her horse returned home without its rider. Blood was reported as being found on the saddle and a search for the girl was started. Her doubled-up body was found in the road. The following day Ella Monroe was arrested and charged with the killing. The prosecution would attempt to show jealousy in connection with Clarence Quiggens. Ella told Mrs. Sam Caswell that if she didn't get Clarence, Eva could not have him. Eva's father said Cody Lnagley was her suitor for five years. Ella was acquitted. (A newspaper reported that apparently the defense theory would indicated belief Eva had been assaulted by a man).

The Ella Monroe Trial

Two Centuries in Elizabethtown and Hardin County, Kentucky.

Hardin County during its many years has been the scene of several murder cases that have attracted more than the normal amount of interest but it is doubtful if any have attracted the interest and speculation as that of the celebrated Ella Monroe case in 1916/17.

The case involved the killing of a nineteen year old girl named Eva Gregory, who lived in the southwest part of the county. She met death on March 21, 1916, while on her way on horseback to the store of Alex Montgomery at Solway a rather prominent mercantile establishment in that portion of the county. Solway is located a few miles from Hardin Springs. The horse returned home without its rider. Blood was reported as being found on the saddle and search for the girl was started. Her doubled-up body was found in the road.

The following day, March 22, 1916, Ella Monroe was arrested and charged with the killing. On March 29, 1916, she was held to the Grand Jury and placed in jail, where she was to remain for several months. Bond was finally furnished on August 23, 1916, and she returned home to await trial in November of that year. Her home was also in the Solway area.

The News issue of August 1, 1916, reported John Monroe, father of Ella Monroe, as attempting suicide, apparently due to distraction and worry over his accused daughter. He shot himself in the head with a .ww caliber rifle; the wound, however, did not prove fatal.

When the case came to trial in November, 1916, it was continued until the March, 1917, term of court. The prosecution was represented by Commonwealth's Attonery Henry Moorman, County Attorney Buckles and George K. Holbert. Denfense attorneys were Hobson L. James and Gus Brown. Circuit Judge J. R. Layman presided over the court Jorors were Joe Hagan, Henry Rogers, Proctor Van Meter, B. E. McClure, A. Berry, C. M. Hill, Zach warren, J. C. Clater, J. Q. A. Lusby, W. D. Cole, Finley Masters and J. A. Osborne.

The Trial created much attention, not only on the local scene, but over a large section of the country. Much newspaper space was devoted to the testimony and events of the trial. Generally circumstantial evicence connected Ella Monroe with the crime, and a newspaper item of March 9, 1917, reported that apparently the defense theory would indiacate belief the Gregory girl had been assaulted by a man. The procecution would attempt to show that jealousy in connection with love affairs with a young man of the community had resulted in the death of the young woman.

Stephen H. Gregory, father of Eva Gregory, was the first witness called. He stated that his daughter left on horseback about noon for Solway (Alex Montgomery's store) on March 21, 1916, and he learned of his daughter's death, by phone, about four hours later from Mrs. John Quiggens. When he reached the scene, he found her body doubled up, lying in the road, out of view of any house. Her clothes were powder-burned. He swaore that Eva Gregory was nineteen years old and that Coy Langley had been her suitor for five yars. He denied they were engaged to be married.

For the Commonwealth, a witness, Mrs. Sam Caswell made a statement that Ella Monroe told her that if she didn't get Clarence Quiggens, Eva Gregory should not have him. Mrs. Caswell's statement that blood was found on the meal sack of Eva Gregory's horse before the sack was removed from the horse, indicatd the girl was killed while riding the horse and not on the ground.

The defense obtained a statement from Steve Gregory, that if any love affair existed between his daughter and Clarence Quiggens, he was not aware of it and that they were fourth cousins. A confusing statement was made by John Quiggens that blood was spilled five feet across the road, indicating a struggle between the Gregory girl and her assailant. Judge Layman refused to allow Will Walker to tesify as to tracks (foot prints) found about the scene the moring after the shotting. Another bit of testimony that had considerable bearing on the case was the failure of William Skeeters and Ida Skeeters to identify some patched shoes offered as evidence as being worn by Ella Monroe on the day of the shooting.

The prosecution based its case on the reported jealousy over Clarence Quiggens; the threats of Ella Monroe against Eva Gregory; the tracks of shoes leading away from the shooting scene; the wad of a .28-gauge gun found on the body of the slain girl; coupled with the fact that the only .28-gauge gun in the entire Solway Community was in the home of Ella Monroe.

The March 16, 1917, issue of the News reported that Ella Monroe was acquitted by unanlmous verdict on the first ballot of the jury and a happy family left Elizabethtown for their humble home near Solway. Defense attorneys suprised a crowded court room by declaring that no evidence would be offered in their client's defense. Evi dently they felt confident the evidence and claims of the prosecution were so circumstantial that no case had been proven. Sentiment in regard to the case was strong and it was discussed for a long time afterward.
